Company Overview

Aluminum Corporation of China (CHALCO), incorporated in 2001, is the world's largest aluminum producer by volume. Its products include aluminum alloys, high-purity aluminum, and fine alumina. CHALCO boasts a complete industrial chain, encompassing bauxite mineral resource exploration, alumina refining, aluminum smelting, aluminum alloy production, carbon anode manufacturing, and coal production. The company exemplifies the successful integration of China's aluminum industry. In 2022, CHALCO acquired a 29.1% stake in Yunnan Aluminum, further solidifying its position as the global leader in alumina and aluminum capacity. The company also controls the largest bauxite reserves in China and continues its overseas expansion in Guinea through the Boffa project. CHALCO was primary listed on the HKEX in 2001 and has been listed on the SHEX since 2007.

Investment Overview

Government's anti-involution guidelines spur market consolidation expectations. The China Government announced its intention to guide efforts aimed at reducing price competition and improving overcapacity conditions across various industries. The Ministry of Industry and Information Technology (MIIT) further stated that a plan targeting 10 industries, including metals, would be published to eliminate outdated capacity. Following this announcement, we anticipate the alleviation of the oversupply situation, driven by expectations of an improved supply structure and accelerated market consolidation.

Chalco's bauxite resource expansion to enhance cost competitiveness. The company holds the largest bauxite reserves in China, and supplements these with high-quality overseas sources from Africa, South America and Southeast Asia. It has the target to increase bauxite self supply rate to 100% from 60% in 2025. Given that bauxite constitutes 30% to 45% of alumina production costs, Chalco's substantial reserves are expected to drive lower production costs and enhance long-term profitability for its alumina business.

Industry leadership bolstered by economies of scale. Chalco commands the largest global capacity for both alumina and aluminium. China's moratorium on new aluminum capacity approvals is expected to solidify Chalco's leading market position. Furthermore, with near-100% capacity utilisation within China's aluminum industry, Chalco's aluminum business enjoys a positive outlook, driven by strong price momentum and its economies of scale.

We maintain BUY for Chalco with TP increased to RMB13.8/HKD15.2 based on more positive aluminium profitability outlook, and revise up Chalco's EPS forecast of FY25F/FY26F by 28%/21% to RMB0.83/RMB0.92. Our target PE increased to 15x (previously 10x), higher than industry average, to reflect Chalco's leading position, better scale effects and cost advantages, and improving dividend yield.

Risks

Aluminium price volatility, higher than expected alumina capacity expansions, or a sudden decline in aluminium demand could potentially disrupt our assumptions.
